The settlement reached with the 9 states is a big step in the right direction. I find it ridiculous that American companies fight each others while foreign companies competing in the same field try to fill the gap. Microsoft is a pioneer and it is a shame that other companies which could not catch up attempt to penalize Microsoft. Who are these people who do not accept the rules of free market ? and what are the benefits for US companies to continue this legal war ? Abroad people are laughing when they see the millions of dollars spent on this purely legal fees.... What is the finality ? Certain CEO of losing companies should swallow their ego and accept the ruling....

I expect the DOJ do bring an end to this case against one of the biggest pride of the USA.
